If it be decided to maintain merely a protectorate and allow a - native government to maintain a considerable military force at Hué so that the Resident may be in a position to enforce compliance with his views on the part of the native authorities should they not readily fall in with them. As to the actual situation, it is not stated in our Saigon contemporaries what was the number of the attacking party in the affair of the successor, the Marquis Saiouzi. 4th July, nor what number of troops accompanied the King in his flight. Some time ago the nominal strength of the Annamite army was estimated by one of the French officers attached to the Residency at 130,250; of this number 43,200 were in garrison at Hué, in addition to which there were 7,450 in immediate attendance on the King. These figures, however, appear to include all the camp followers, such as the chair bearers and other servants of the mandarins and even the King's cooks. The number of fighting men with the King will therefore probably not be large, and some idea of what the fighting qualities of these are when compared with those of the French soldiers may be gathered from the fact that the result of the attack they made on the French garrison at Hué was that they had fifteen ordered for a fixed period will be continued until hundred killed themselves while they only has accepted the presidency of the committee succeeded in placing some fifty Frenchmen hers de combat. Calculating the world's use at 300 millions of tons annually, this bad alone would furnish the whole of these demands coal is of great specific weight, high purity, and extraordinary consistence. M. Pumpelly puts the annual output for China at 2,965,000 metric tons. The time approches when those bods will be worked, and with railways, China will throw some energy into perfecting the means of extracing her war armament, and the balance of trade with China threatens to be considerably changed. The payment for cotton, tea, and silk will be in seal. At present we have only found cotton and opium to give to the Chinese in large quantities. It is evident that the exploitation of coal mines and the introduction of railways will be for the principal advantage of China; and whilst our demands for Chinese products will continue to increase, there is nothing we can offer in exchange for the progressive drainage of a metal—silver—

IMPERIAL QUARTO. TANGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY. WITH THE PURTI AND MANDABIN PRONUNCIATION.

An Angle-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been ! compelied to coin to express the numerous objecta in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in scionce generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exercises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given the accents being carefully marked on the best Chinese and English type correspond in the size inst., at THREE P.M. of body, thereby effecting a vart economy of space, achieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore chargeterized Chinese publications. To the illustrate the vast scope of the work following facts are submitted for consideration: Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 | HE P. & O. S. N. Co.'s Steamship Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst his work contains more than 50,000 English words, and apwards of 600,000 Chinese charactors. Again, despite all the grammers and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as

EXTRACT. THE TWO ELIZABETHS.

A. D. 1209. Amidst Thuringia's wooded hills she dwelt. A high-born princess, servant of the poor. Sweetening with gracious words the food she dealt To starving throngs at Wartburg's blazoned door. A blinded zealot held her soul in chains, Cramped the sweet anture that he could not kill, Scarred her fair body with his penance-pains, And gauged her conscience by his narrow will. God gave her gifts of beauty and of grace,

With fast and vigil she denied them all;" Unquestioning, with sad, pathetic fade, She followed mockly at her stern guide's call. So drooped and died her home-blown rose of bliss In the chill rigour of a discipline That turned her fond lips from her mother's kiss And made her joy of motherhood a sin. To their sad level by compassion led,

One with the low and vile herself she made, While thankless misery mocked the hand that fed. And laughed to scorn her piteous masquerade. But still, with patience that outwerried hate She gave bor all while yet she had to give; And then her empty hands, importunate, In prayor she lifted that the poor might live. Sore pressed by grief, and wrongs more hard to bear,

And dwarfed and stiffed by a harsh control, · She kept life fragrant with good deeds and prayer, And fresh and pure the white flower of her soul. Death found her busy at her task; one word Alone she uttered as she paused to die, Silence! "-then listened even as one who beard With song and wing the angels drawing nigh! Now Fra Angelico's roses fill her hands,

Kneel at her feet. Her marble image stands Worshipped and crowned in Marburg's hely fanc. Yes, whereaco'er her Church its cross uprears, Wide as the world her story still is told; In manhood's reverence, woman's prayers and tears She lives again whose grave, is centuries old. And still, despite the weakness or the blame Of blind submission to the blind, she hath A tender place in hearts of every name, And more than Rome owns Saint Elizabeth !

And, on Murillo's convass, Want and Pain

A. D. 1780. Slow ages passed; and lo! another came, An English matron, in whose simple faith Nor priestly rule nor ritual had claim, A plain, uncanonized Elizabeth. No sack cloth robe, nor ashen-sprinkled bair, Nor wasting fast, nor scourge, nor vigil long Marred her calm presence. God had made her fair, And she could do His goodly work no wrong.

Their yoke is easy and their busdon light Whose sole confessor is the Christ of God; Her quiet trust and faith transcending sight Smoothed to her feet the difficult paths she trod And there she walked, as duty bade her go, Safe and ansallied as a cloistered nun, Slamed with her plainness Fashion's gaudy show, And overcame the world she did not shun. In Earlham's bowers, in Plashet's liberal hall. In the great city's restless growd and din,

Her ear was open to the Master's call, And knew the summons of His voice within. Tunder as mother, heautiful as wife, Amidst the throngs of prisoned crime she stood, In modest raiment faultless as her life, The type of England's worthiest womanhood! To melt the hearts that harshness turned to stone

The sweet persuasion of her lips sufficed, And guilt, which only hate and fear had known, Saw in her own the pitying love of Christ, So wheresoe or the guiding Spirit went She followed, finding every prison cell It opened for her sacred as a tent Pitched by Gennesaret or by Jacob's well. And Pride and Fashion felt her strong appeal,

How hand in hand went wisdom with her real, And woman's pity kept the bounds of law. She rests in God's peace; but her memory stirs The air of earth as with an angel's wings, And warms and moves the hearts of men like hers. The sainted daughter of Hungarian Mags!

And priest and rule: marvelled at they saw

At the age of five or six the boys do not stay longer with their mothers. PAYMENT TO SINGERS. The sums paid to famous singers for their services have often attracted notice, and sometimes a little envy on the part of those CHRONICLE & DIRECTOR who forget that it is only the first in the profession to whom money-making comes easy, and that hard work for little pay is the lot of almost all the rost. If few get much a great many get little enough. When Gabrielli visited Russia in 1768, and Catherine II. wished to engage her services, she asked 5,000 duents as salary. "Far too much," said the Empress, amazed. "Why that is more than I pay my field-marshals! "Then let your field-marshale sing for you," replied Gabrielli. A hundred pounds a night was paid about 1775 to Agujari for singing two songs during her engagement at the Pantheon Concerts in London : it was an enermous figure for those days. When CHINA-Catalini first came to London, in 1806, she bargained for £2,000 for singing at the King's Theatre in the Haymarket during the season, which lasted from September 15 of that year to August, 1807; together with £100 " to defray the expense of her journey to London, and also one benefit night free of expense." But she ended in receiving much more than that. The total amount got by her from the theatre in 1807, including benefits, was £5,000, and her total profits that year, with concerts, was £16,700. Alboni had £2,000, and Sontag £6,000 for a season at the Opera in London .- Leisure Hour.

A MAN ROUTED BY WEASELS. Delos Lante, an Elk county farmer, bas been annoyed greatly this winter by weasels in his poultry yard and bouse, the bloodthirsty little animals having killed his fowls by the score, and defied all efforts to trap them. The other day Mr. Lante was walking through a stony field on his farm, and he COREAsaw a weasel .run into a big heap of stones piled loosely in the middle of the field. He had a walking stick, and going to the stone pile, began to throw down stones to get at the weasel or scare it out. Presently a weasel jumped out, and he struck it with his cane. It did not run away, but sprang at Linte's Shipping-Officers of the Coasting Steamers of throat—the spot a weasel instinctively tries to seize. The farmer struck at it again and hit it, but it returned gamely to the attack and whether in answer to a signal or not the farmer does not know, weasels began to swarm out of the stone pile on all sides, and in a second were springing upon Laute, climbing nimbly up his clothes, trying to the names of reach his face. They bit him with their sharp testh, and finding that he would be unable to keep the savage little blood-suckers from fastening their teeth in his neck without help, he shook them off as best he could, and started at the top of his speed for home. The weasels followed him until he scaled the re-ongraved in a superior style and brought up fence. His hands were bleading from a to date. Hall & Holtz and Kelly my attendants dozed, for they were worn out with the long march of the day. I begged some plantain, and a lad went to the door, and shouted, "Bring some plantain to the mbonge." A kindly woman brought some. When my meal was ready I asked for a pinch of salt and some water. They shouted for these, and got them. Having finished my meal, I coiled up in my blanket, and next morning, giving them the bell and three strings, thanked them and so we parted. The boys of the wisonage are well attended to, for to get the name of "stingy" is the first ing. the fact that ing. the fact the case in coppore to the Eislang.
